The right glass clearly matters.
 That's why you should care enough to use Museum Glass®

Believe it or not, choosing the right glass for your framing project can have just as much of a "wow" factor as the choice of a frame and mat. How? By using Museum Glass from Tru Vue & SGMC.

With Museum Glass you can clearly see the difference. It's almost as if there is no glass at all. Reflection is reduced by over 85% for the lowest possible reflection rating and the highest light transmission of all other glass on the market.

How does Museum Glass do it? Tru Vue's Magnatron Sputtering, a proprietary manufacturing process creates an ultra-thin coating on the glass that suppresses the reflection of visible lights. This coating renders Museum Glass nearly invisible to the eye, allowing almost nothing to come between you and your ability to enjoy the beauty of whatever is in the frame. Imagine. Optimal clarity for true color transmission. The highest brightness and contrast levels available. And the greatest color neutrality around.

In short, Museum Glass will have you saying "Wow" the minute you see your new, framed piece. But there's more. Museum Glass blocks 98% of harmful UV rays from indoor and outdoor lights helping to protect artwork from fading. This helps your framed piece last a lifetime.

Choosing the right glass clearly does matter. That's why "Wows!" are being heard from coast to coast from people using Museum Glass to finish their framing projects. Ask us about Museum glass for your next framing project. You won't believe the difference.

It's Your Health
100% WHOLE FOODS

10 Reasons to Go Organic

By Tammie Ortlieb

1. Increase the nutritional content of your diet :: Organic foods are lower in nitrates and higher in antioxidants. They provide greater flavor along with increased nutrients.
2. Assure quality in the foods you eat :: You can be certain that the foods you eat have been grown without the use of chemicals. No more questioning the ethics of the farmer who raised the produce on your plate.
3. Reduce the toxins in our land, water, and air :: Many chemicals used in non-organic farming have been applied for years, even decades, before we have discovered potential health risks.
4. Avoid sketchy science :: GMO's (Genetically Modified Organisms) are not exactly food. Genetical engineering involves crossing two organisms that wouldn't cross by natural means. Health risks can be great and uncertain. Fish in my strawberries? No, thank you!
5. Protect the environment :: Build healthy soil. Defend our water resources. Clean our air of noxious pollutants.
6. Promote biodiversity :: Organic farming is nature at its most natural. With the elimination of chemicals, wildlife return to build homes, feed, and give birth.
7. Give back to the community :: Support local farmers. Keep the local economy strong.
8. Protect future generations :: Eliminate risk to unborn children, both by reducing pollutants during prenatal development and by protecting their land for future use.
9. Maintain a reverence for the land :: Eat in season. Respect the nature of growth and giving.
10. Support leaders in innovative research Organic farmers have spent much of their own time and resources to promote a more sustainable healthful way of eating.
