The U.S. publishes over 24 billion newspapers every year, and that's not the only place that newsprint turns up. People use it to wrap packaging, to print junk mail fliers, and to create coupons. All told, that is tons and tons of paper waste every single year. Recycling paper is a great way to put a dent in this waste, but paper recycling is far from an ideal solution. It's inefficient, and each time you recycle paper, you're really downcycling it into an inferior product. Even if you don't get a paper at your house you can still end up with your fair share of newsprint somehow. Sometimes, a fragile thrift store or yard sale find comes wrapped in newspaper. Other times, we get junk mail printed on newsprint. No matter how newsprint manages to creep into your life, we're guessing that you cringe at the thought of wasting it, too. Rather than toss all of that paper in the recycle bin, you can reuse old newspaper around your home and in the garden!

We Have Kendamas

"A kendama is a traditional Japanese toy which consists of a wooden, hammer-like object with a ball connected to it by a string. In English, kendama may be referred to as ring and pin and bears similarities to the classic cup-and-ball game, known in the Latin American world as balero. The principle of these toys are the same: catching one object with another, where both are joined by a string."

"To play with a kendama, one grips the toy and using one hand only, jerks the ball so that it may be caught in one of the cups or impaled on the spike. More advanced tricks are sequential balances, juggles, and catches. Benefits? You betcha! Kendama helps build hand-eye coordination besides the fact that it's loads of fun. A great gift for young and old at just $19.99. No batteries required.

Pesticide Exposure—
From Prenatal to Parkinson's

by Brenda Watson

I often write about the widespread negative effects of chemicals and pesticides. We live in a toxic soup and the more people realize that, the more likely they will be to make changes. Ultimately, the more natural products and services you buy, the more those products and businesses will appear until one day (in my perfect world) we will be able to live without all these toxins.

Take a couple recent studies (out of many) on pesticide exposure. As it turns out, prenatal exposure to pesticides is linked to lower IQ in children at age 7. And people exposed to pesticides near the workplace are at increased risk for developing Parkinson's disease. Everywhere I look is another study to add to the mounds of evidence that the toxins we are regularly exposed to in everyday life are destroying us. Literally!

In the prenatal pesticide exposure study published in the journal Environmental Health Perspectives, for every ten-fold increase in organophosphate pesticides detected during pregnancy, the child experienced a 5.5 point decrease in IQ score by age 7. The study found a correlation with prenatal exposure specifically, suggesting that there is a critical time period to which the baby in womb is susceptible.

In the Parkinson's study, researchers found that exposure to the three commonly sprayed crop pesticides—ziram, maneb and paraquat—while at work — was associated with a three-fold increase in risk of later developing Parkinson's disease. Working near a field (not necessarily in direct contact with the pesticides, as they tend to drift up to several hundred meters from the fields) was enough to increase risk. These are two small—yet significant—reasons to try to eat organic when possible, and to support your seven channels of elimination (colon, liver, lungs, lymph, kidneys, skin and blood) with regular cleansing and detoxification.
